FOREWORD

The voyage is over. After mingled pleasures and hardships, our ship has come to rest in the long-striven-for harbor.

But now once more the sea is calling. Soon we shall embark in the vessel, Life. As we sail, this time into uncharted waters, may these few pages bring fleeting memories of the joy and smiles which we have known.

Dedicated

To Miss Lucia B. Able in sincere appreciation for her untiring efforts to instill in our hearts a desire for wisdom, purity, and character.

HISTORY

About the middle of September in 1930, the class of '34 entered Boyden High School. The things which impressed the group were: the huge building with its long, wide halls; the many classrooms and stairs; and the businesslike attitude of everybody. It was clear that even Freshmen were going to have to work.

Then, on Halloween night the class had a party. Each room gave a stunt to entertain the other rooms. Then there was a parade of tacky costumes in the auditorium with a prize for the tackiest. Billy Burke, disguised as an old maid school teacher, won.

Freshmen participated in all activities that year. Two of the rooms, 113 and 102, jointly won the cup for the best homeroom. Also, the group made a good showing on Field Day and won most of the P. T.—S. A. awards of the winter. But, best of all, with the stunt "The Circus" the class won the prize at the Senior Carnival, defeating the haughty Seniors with their minstrel show.

Then came 1931-'32. Since all had worked so hard the first year, and had learned all there was to know, the class decided not to do much work but to drift along on reputation. One of the chief events of the season was the operetta "Jerry of Jerice Road" in which sophomores played quite an important part. Bill Bennett, Christine Cook, Billy Burke, Virginia Dare Miller, and Esther Hambley had leading roles; also, many others were in dance and chorus numbers.

The junior year was the busiest and the most important; in it the group accomplished more things than ever before. The very first month only seven students in the whole student body made all A's and four of these were from the same junior room, 212. At the end of the year the record was even better. It was found that seven juniors: Franklin Crowell, Tom Crawford, Jim Dorsett, Esther Hambley, Sarah Lentz, Rebecca Weant, and Mildred Williams had been so outstanding in scholastic leadership, character, and service that they had been elected to membership in the National Honor Society—the highest honor attainable in high school. Billy Burke and Russell Kerr, then seniors, and, since then, a large number of the class of '34 have been elected to membership.

Fertune smiled in debating, too. All four of Salisbury's representatives: Bill Coughenour, Rebecca Weant, Jim Dorsett, and Mildred Williams were from 212. Nor was the class lacking in dramatics. When Boyden High put on a Color Day program the juniors were the winners with a play, "A Woman's Way". Clarence Kluttz and Mildred Williams were starred.

The closing event of the year was the annual Junior-Senior banquet at which the juniors gave the seniors a good time. It would be useless to try to enumerate all the outstanding athletes and their accomplishments. They are beyond number.

1933-'34 was quiet—one of concentrated study—for with the curtailed program everybody realized that they had to learn everything possible in the short time that remained. The class had no time for outside activities; there was a hard struggle to secure even the annual. Then came commencement—the end. It followed the usual general plan: class day on Friday night, baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, and graduation exercises on Tuesday.

Before the class could fully realize that its history had been begun, it was finished. The group, approximately two hundred strong, had been absorbed by the world outside.

Historian, Harry Harvey

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Let peace and quiet reign over this August assemblage of intellectuals and otherwise. Having reached the sage and ripe old age of "old heads" and having been privileged to grace this magnificent auditorium in the well-known "bald-head" row, we the class of '34 believing ourselves to be in complete command of that which should fill our cranial cavities and believing ourselves to be of sound body, although several hearts have been lost in the course of time, and believing ourselves to be capable of making provisions for the disposal of our worldly goods, do hereby profess and confess, affirm and confirm, swear and declare, devise and revise, make and remake, sound and resound, construct and erect, the following Last Will and Testament. We desire and crave, pray and petition, implore and solicit, entreat and supplicate, importune and conjure you, our proteges, to carry on the ideals and traditions of this outstanding institution of higher learning, from which we shall soon pass with high anticipations of an eventful life to unroll before us.

Therefore, be it known to whom it may concern, that the following wishes are to be held sacred and above criticism by the relatively unlearned underclassmen of this school and that the inalienable right of one passing from one strata into another to control the disposing of his chattel be not disputed by any of the aforementioned who are intellectually aspiring.

Be it hereby resolved that we, the Senior Class of Boyden High School, herewith will and bequeath:

First:

The heart-felt gratitude of the entire Senior Class to Mr. Knox and the other members of the faculty who have been our friends and advisers through our four years of enrollment in this school.

Second:

The dearest of our thoughts to our parents.

Third:

The chewing gum which has been hastily jammed on the bottom of Caroline Neave's seat by the owner thereof when called on to stand and read her French, to Mr. Lentz and the Janitors.

Fourth:

Having made these bequests as a class, the following individuals do will and bequeath:

First:

Alice Wright Murphy and Frank Gooding leave their ability to pass notes to whoever believe they can attain a higher degree of efficiency.

Second:

Ed "Dad" Miller leaves his seeming nonchalance at failing to Dalvin Cole with the hope that he will be able to use this priceless gift to his advantage.

Third:

The class of '33 willed the sidewalk between the flag pole and the main walk to R. B. Wood and Hilda Smith, but because of R. B.'s awful technique they will all rights to said piece of concrete to Marvin Cook and Beck Ramsay. We hope and pray that Marvin as a Beau Brummell will be better than R. B. was.

Fourth:

Dot Hedrick leaves her fresh air taxi to her sister, Billy, hoping that it will continue to be used as such.

Fifth:

Palmer Laughbridge leaves his ability to drive the little white spheroid to Bill Jake Rendleman.

Sixth:

Clarence Kluttz leaves his ability to sling the wellknown political ballyhoo to Vance Daniels who seems to have come quite a good distance along this line.

Seventh:

Robert Leonard wills his hot trumpet to Sunny Sigmon, as Sunny has already shown some talent with the old pipe.

Eighth:

Joe Rice Little, the "nuts" of the Senior Class leaves his foolishness to anyone crazy enough to take it.

Ninth:

Russell Kerr and Elizabeth Manning bequeath the dignity of the class to Eleanor Newman and Goode Crowder.

Tenth:

Evelyn Albright leaves her huge brown eyes and winsomeness to Margaret Shaver, hoping that they will serve her well.

Eleventh:

Reginald Rogers leaves his extreme self-assurance to all who think that they can put on as big a front as he has.

Twelfth:

Jim Dorsett leaves his executive ability, of which he has shown himself to have plenty, to Goode Crowder.

Thirteenth:

Virginia Dare Miller leaves two barrels of noise to be used next year in the fourth period study hall when the unusual silence begins to settle down.

Fourteenth:

Uriah Lucas wills his ability to turn corners on two wheels to John Church, hoping, yea praying, that his tires are in good condition.

Fifteenth:

Charles Morgan and Fred Pinkston leave their ability to be real friends to all who think that they can do as well.

Sixteenth:

Marie Cline leaves her power to bring 'em back dazed but still alive to Virginia Devereux.

Seventeenth:

Hayden Kesler wills his profound knowledge of women to anybody who thinks that he can use it.

Eighteenth:

"Jerry" McMillan leaves her beatific expression to Betsy Ross.

Nineteenth:

Mildred Williams bequeaths to some incoming Freshman her instantaneous grasp of new topics in math, while the rest of the Senior Class offers sympathy to that Freshman's future math teachers.

Twentieth:

Bill Coughenour leaves to Ligon Gillespie his football shoes with the little item of information that the Red Boot Shoe Shop has an expert on drawing up shoes.

Twenty-first:

Max Busby leaves his ability for speculating to Jack Ritchie with the hope that unlike himself he will be able to pay off his debts.

Twenty-second:

Charles Clark, having become quite proficient in the art of noiseless walking in the halls, bequeaths his valuable knowledge to "Boots" McCanless.

Hereupon we, the foresaid class of '34, do affix our signatures and seal to this, May 28 in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred thirty-four, and do hereby appoint as executor Gorden Ashby Kirkland.

STATISTICS

Through extensive tests with Mr. Henry Boger of the science department, it has been found that the average senior voice causes five thousand vibrations per minute. However, these figures are not exact because Albert Willard had the "Goslines".

Three seniors—Rebecca Weant, Rebekah Safrit, and Josephine Surratt have started using the broad "a".

George Edward Rusher, Mary Whitener, and Lawrence Smith have spent eight hours this semester trying to get out of a fifty-five minute French test.

During the four years, the seniors have written 25,795 love letters. 25,794 of these were written by Hilda Smith and R. B. Wood to each other. The other one, a ten page affair, was composed by W. F. Whitt to a little junior.

The average senior's mouth is two and one-eighth inches wide. There was a mistake, in the first measurement, of one-half inch due to Virginia Dare Miller's absence from school. She has the largest mouth in the class; it stretches from ear to ear.

The average size shoe worn by seniors is seven and one-half. Sam Ryburn brings up the average with his size eleven and one-half. However, Graham Weant reduces it to normal—he comes to school barefooted.

The seniors have traveled extensively. Two, Pritchard Carlton and Patrick Willey, have been to Europe. Just last week Dick Wright and Dorothy Trexler took an extended trip, too; they went down to China Grove.

By popular vote of the class the following superlatives were chosen:

Best looking	Esther Hambley	Clarence Kluttz
Best athlete	Evelyn Griffith	Charles Graham
Best dressed	Lrene Graham	Leon Bradshaw
Most original	Mary Eddis Kluttz	Sam Ryburn
Most musical	Lois Morgan	Billy Burke
Most personality	Nell Dedmon	James Dorsett
Most attractive	Caroline Neave	Tom Hines
Most Popular	Marie Cline	Sam Ryburn
Most talkative	Virginia Dare Miller	Uriah Lucas
Thinnest	Mildred Anderson	Ed Miller
Tallest	Ellen Mahaley	Joe Little
Shortest	Mary Whitener	Jimmie Branch
Fattest	Esther Hambley	W. F. Whitt
Biggest Flirt	Betsy Grubb	Hayden Kesler
Best-all-round	Mildred Williams	James Dorsett
Best actor	Virginia Dare Miller	William Bennett
Best scholar	Rebecca Weant	Harry Harvey
Best disposition	Esther Hambley	Frank Gooding
Most dependable	Rebecca Weant	James Dorsett

I, Max Busby, swear that to the best of my knowledge, the above statistics are correct.

PROPHECY

In the spring of the year 1948, I, having received a generous legacy from a maiden aunt, set out from Salisbury, N. C., to go to Europe. On the way to New York I made several stops and to my surprise met quite a few Boyden graduates of the class of '34. While waiting for my plane in Washington, I decided to sit in on a meeting of the Senate and the House. Tom Crawford I discovered as Senator from North Carolina, and through him I later found that Pritchard Carlton was Secretary of the Interior, James Dorsett, Secretary of the Treasury, and Clarence Kluttz, Secretary of Commerce. On to the House I went, and there Bill Coughenour was Speaker and Walter Wagoner and Tom Hines were Representatives. When I left Washington, I felt that I had had a reunion of the class of '34, but little did I dream that before my trip was up I should have found out what that whole graduating class was doing!

As luck will have it, my plane had to make a forced landing in Baltimore, and with three or four hours at my disposal, my mind turned to a visit to Johns Hopkins Hospital. Imagine my surprise when I saw Frank Gooding as head surgeon and Evelyn Albright, Mary Eddis Kluttz, Betsy Cruse, Nell and Eloise Hartline, and Vivian Shue as nurses.

Upon arriving in New York on a Thursday morning, I was informed that my boat would sail Saturday at midnight, so I got busy and planned to see the Metropolis before leaving. Of course, I couldn't expect to do much in two days, but I wasn't going to let time go to waste. My first business was to get a few clothes and "fix up" a little for my trip. In one big department store I found Mildred Anderson, Edna Pitman, and Virginia Chilson as head of departments and Harris Luther and James Tuck as advertising managers. An attractive Beauty Parlor sign caught my eye and I went in, to find Sarah Lentz and Margaret Beaver in the business. When I came out, I not only looked a lot better, but I had information concerning several other members of my graduating class. Clara Lee Bowen, Evelyn Griffith, and Catherine and Claudine Stallings had become well-known dress designers, Eddie Chester and Ella Frances Hubbard were teaching gymnastics, and Rachel Keever and Hope Yeager were Interior Decorators. That afternoon I decided to take in a big national tennis match and guess who were defending Salisbury's name---Frank Dorsett, Lawrence Smith, John Henry Spencer, and Charles Morgan. I heard the next day that our four won--two the doubles' championship and one the singles' championship, but I never did hear who won what!

Metropolitan Opera House has always held an attraction for me, and Thursday night I went. Whom should I see but Christine Cook and Naomi Rendleman--world-famous sopranos, Lois Morgan--an internationally known pianist, and Graham Weant--a renowned baritone! But that was just one of my surprises. Through Teeney I found out about many of my old friends and how varied their occupations were. Virginia Dare Miller was starring in one of Broadway's biggest musical hits with a huge success, Dot Hedrick and Nell Dedmon had all New York stunned with their dancing team, Sam and Stamey Carter had one of the city's largest Pharmaceutical Houses, and Ed Gardner, Charles "Red" Smith, "Tip" Harrison, Charlie Graham, Hayden Kesler, Charlie Clark, Ed Saleeby, Jim Trexler, Burns Beaver, Ervin Allen, and Draden Edmundson--all members of Salisbury's famous "Golden Tide" '34--had organized the nation's most famous football coaching school up on the Hudson. I also learned that Rebecca Weant and Frances Kirkpatrick were editors of one of the most important magazines of the literary world of the day, and that Arnold Bogle, Franklin Crowell, George Brantley, Albert Willard, W. F. Whitt, and Cayce Owen had recently opened a scientific laboratory and observatory and were making much progress. When I left Teeney, my mind was reeling with a mixture of opera and graduates!

Early the next morning I headed for the Empire State Building, and whom should I find up on the fortieth story but Sam Ryburn and Tom Rice conducting a cartoonist correspondence school, and Aubrey Childers, Dan Lewis, Charles Plant, Conrad Howan, and Aaron Watkins in the insurance business. Before

I got down, I also saw Jimmy Branch, Bill Ruble, and Emmette Thompson in charge of the head office of a big truck concern and Lorene Graham, Jemima McMillan, Elizabeth Benson and "Dick" Manning fully established in their well-known "Empire School of Etiquette".

I bummed around the rest of the day and didn't meet anybody else I knew, and that night I decided to go to Radio City. There I saw Elwood Sink Starr-ing in a Minstrel and Uriah Lucas and Max Busby as wellknown comedians with the fame of "Amos n'Andy" of '34, but not blacked up and working under the title of "Zeb n'Ruf"--two farmers. In talking to Max later I learned that Harry Harvey and Joe Rice Little had gone exploring into the stratosphere for the National Geographic--Joe making discoveries and Harry writing them up, that Billy Burke--as pianist and leader of an orchestra--had gone to Holly-wood with his orchestra, in which were Cottie Jones, Rob Leonard, Dick Wright and Carl Tolbert, all making quite a success in the movies, that Palmer Laugh-ridge was the American Golf Champion, and that Henry Fairley and Russell Kerr had become big oil magnates.

All Saturday I spent in sight-seeing in general, and by 7 o'clock I was ready to stop. I packed at my hotel, sent all my baggage to the pier, went to the St. Regis--now old, but still popular--for dinner and dancing with an old friend, and arrived at the pier at 11:35 P. M. My boat, the "Eldorado", was one of the fastest liners of the day and made the crossing to London in two and a half days. I went straight to bed as soon as we left the harbor, so the next morning I decided I'd have an early peep at the ship. Whom should I see but Betsy Grubb, Marie Cline, Caroline Neave and Alice Wright Murphy up playing deck tennis and all looking as pretty as ever! Alice Wright generously informed me that they were all going over to Paris to get fall wardrobes, and I gathered that the four had married wealth, but were off for a spree with fond hubbies at home. I also found out from Alice Wright that Mary Edna Rouzer was teaching on the foreign fields in China and that Leon Bradshaw was a world famous aviator and had set many records--among them being the youngest flyer to circle the globe in the fewest number of hours. At breakfast I saw Gazelle Sherwood, Mary Douglas Tinnin, Helen Rimer, and Hilda Smith, and they all told me that they were Paris bound where they all had jobs as modelers for dresses awaiting them. I was just getting over the surprise of seeing so many old friends on board, when who should the captain turn out to be but R. B. Wood and the ship doctor, but Ralph Roberts! I did feel as tho I were at a reunion!

The trip over was delightful, and before I knew it we had landed in Liver-pool and were bound for London by train. We got to our hotel late in the afternoon and by the time I was unpacked dinner was served. Hardly had I gotten seated in the dining-room when I heard a most familiar voice and who should I see but Esther Hambley--as pretty as ever and now the Lady Esther Cunningham. I remembered that a few years ago she had become Miss America and had held second place for Miss Universe. The next day she took me shop-ping, and we saw Reba Holland, Gertrude Lyerly, Charlotte Holshouser, and Letha Goodman operating a smart looking store for ladies' apparel known as the "Canterberry Shoppe". I bought several things there and Reba told me that George Rusher, Fred Pinkston, and Nelson Haden were owners of a big steamship company in London, and that Rebecca Safrit, Rena Morgan, Josephine Surratt and Frances Fisher ran the most popular florist shop in the city. She also said that Sarah Devereux was now the Lady Sarah Milligan and that Mildred Garrett, Juanita Safrit, and Carrie Lue Allen were the fashion designers of England. When we left the "Canterberry Shoppe", I was about fifteen people wiser than when I went in.

The rest of my five days in London was spent in sight-seeing and shopping and the only other person I saw that I knew was Bobby Hartsell, who was playing the piano in one of the smartest of London night clubs.

From England we went to France and to Le Havre, and whom should I see in Le Havre but "Beau" Wiley as consul in the same position his father once held. "Beau" told me that Mary Whitner was ambassador to Sweden and Pharis Broadway was ambassador to Italy, and that in Paris he had seen William Alsobrooks, Harold Tysinger and Billy Goore, all big stock brokers. I left Le Havre with several addresses to look up in Paris, and as soon as we got there I got to work. In one of the busiest streets I found Olin Broadway, Linwood Childers and Leslie Edwards doing a big business in the manufacturing and exporting of perfumes. After buying several boxes to take to friends at home, I was talking to Linwood, and he informed me that Paul Lorbacher, Delma Lowder, Jack Kluttz, John Henry Jacobs and Bill Lemly were owners of the biggest French railroad, and that Gertrude Cashwell, Catherine Clodfelter, Madeline Walters and Emma Wellman had opened one of the most complete Parisian shops for women's clothes. When I got back to the hotel someone told me the owner had been looking for me with several cablegrams, and when I found him, guess who the owner was—none other than L. H. Julian! L. H. said that he, Buren Guthrie, Wayne Nussman and Dillon Rabon owned a chain of the three largest hotels in Paris, and that they were considering building a fourth hotel.

We stayed in Paris a week and those seven days were crowded to the hilt with sight-seeing, and when we left for Rome I felt we had certainly made a clean sweep of the big French city! In Rome at the time we arrived a big international art exhibit was going on, and I soon discovered that the American exhibit was owned and being shown by Evelyn Beaver, Ellen Gill, Muriel Trexler, Isabelle Yount, Valeria Shives, Helen Jones, and Lucille Kesler. One day while in Rome we noticed an interesting looking book shop specializing in old Roman and Greek literature, and upon entering, whom did we find but Ruth Hefner, Helen Clark, Mary Chandler and Willa Cauble! Ruth told me that William Aldred, Bill Brown, and Murray Tysinger owned the fastest air line between Rome and Moscow, and that Jim Clontz, Robert Cooke, and Leo Myers were foreign managers for the Standard Oil in Italy with headquarters in Rome.

Our next stop was Geneva, Switzerland, where the League of Nations was in session. When we went to sit in on a meeting of the League who should be speaking for the American point of view of some question, but Tom Zumbunnen—one of our representatives to Geneva. Tom later told me that Bill McDaniel, Ed McLeod, Ed Miller, Robert Small and John Gardner were all newspaper reporters who were supposed to get the "dope" on the session of the League for their American papers.

From Geneva we flew to Sweden in a big passenger plane, and imagine my surprise when the pilot turned out to be Reginald Rogers, with Delbert Peeler as co-pilot and Helen Butler, Martha Camp and Opal McMillan as hostesses! While in Stockholm we noticed a big ship-building yard and found none other than Walter Kincaid, Paul Misenheimer, Zeb Morgan, the Weisner twins—John and Bill, and Ed Shuping as owners. Walter told me that Harrell Sapp and Stokes Harvell were pilots for the Great Swedish-Norse Airline, and that Ralph and Kenneth Earnhardt, Bill Cashwell, Muriel Cauble, Carl Hartman and Raymond Ruffy ran a big fishery, up on the coast, that was famous throughout all the fishing world.

We left Sweden by boat after a stay of three enjoyable days and sailed for Dublin, Ireland. On my first walk down the street of Dublin I saw a very attractive florist shop, and went in, to find Mattie Elizabeth Miller, Elvata Harrison, Mildred Plyler, Dorothy Trexler and Louise Ennis as proprietors. Mattie informed me that Sam Kluttz and Howard Sherrill were in the telegraph business in Dublin, and that Aileen Hansell, Margaret Harrison, Zanette Harvell and Helen Kluttz had a big business selling Irish linen and lace. I went by their shop to buy some lace and Helen asked me if I had been to the folk-dancing school that Ellen Mahaley, Lucille McCormick, Mildred Morgan, Ruby Sheets and Mildred Walter had. I said no, so Helen took me the next day. We left Dublin in two days for Liverpool to return home. On the return trip my head was bursting with all the occupations of the members of my graduating class of '34. I could hardly wait to tell my friends at home all about my friends in Europe!

SHIPS

Azure skies, open sea,
Our ships are ready to depart;
Impetuous hearts are there on the lee,
Each waiting in his bark.

Eleven years---making ready
For life's journey to arrive.
May we each be pilots steady,
Enduring all that before us lies.

Only God can truly name
The course each shall steer.
Some may be vague and untamed;
Others have naught to fear.

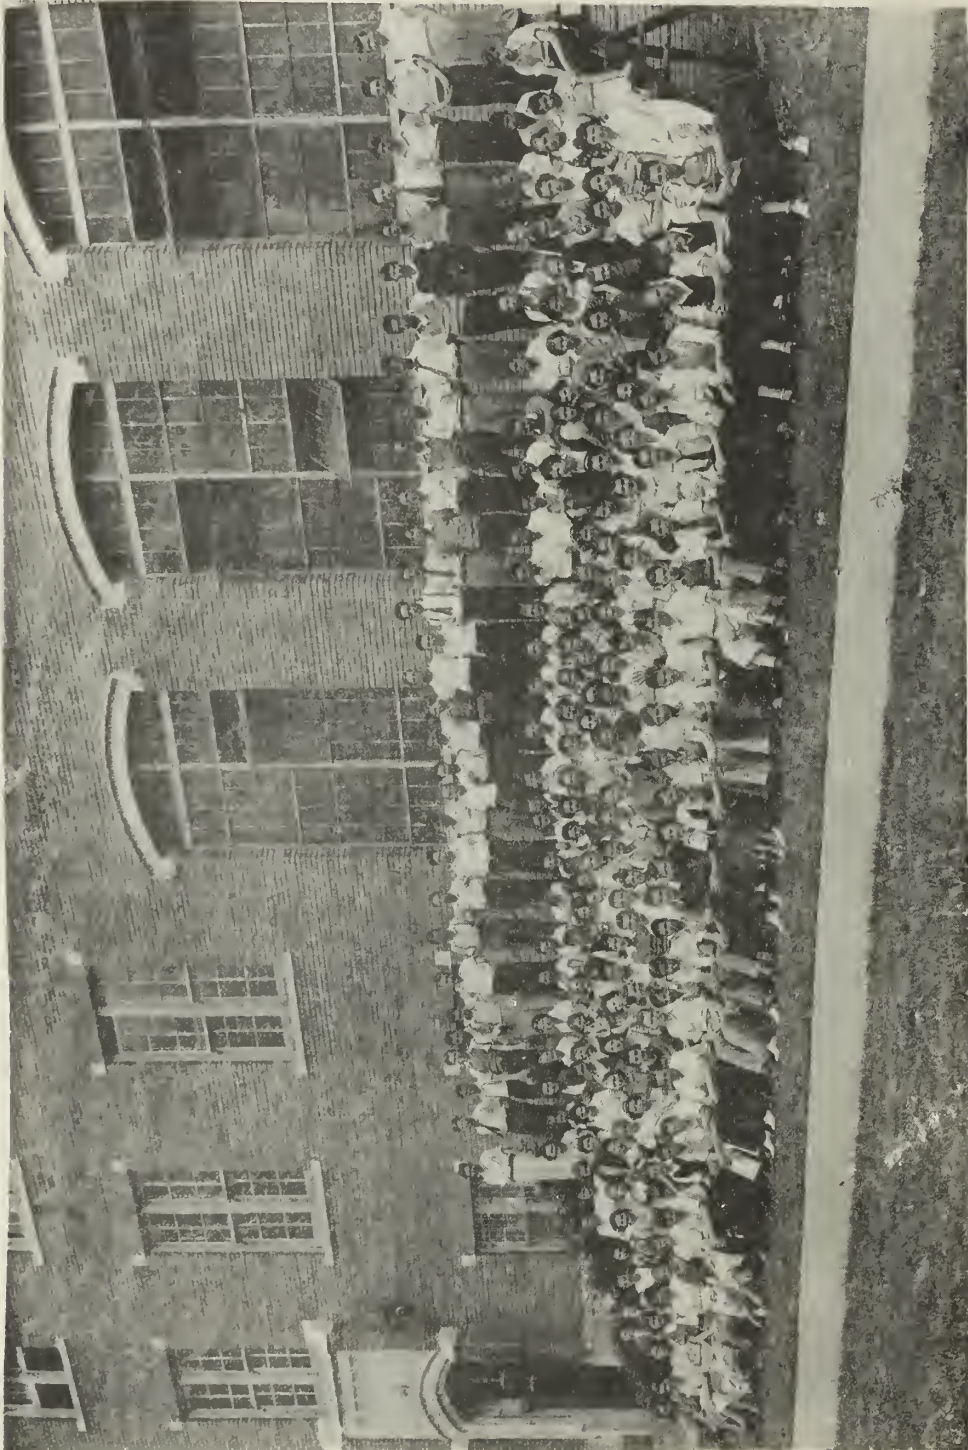

For some it's an open sea,
Blue, and fresh, and ever free!
For some—heaving waves there'll be,
White, mad, colossal on the sea!

Ships of good will, or battle ships
We may pilot across the deep.
“Ever Onward” on all our trips,
Treasures let our voyages reap.

Poet, Alice Wright Murphy.

Football practice began about September 1, with about sixty boys reporting. Of this number the following were letter men: Charles Graham, Tip Harrison, Ed Saleeby, Charles Smith, Charles Clark, Capt. Hayden Kesler, Ralph Smith, Draden Edmundsen, Marshal Hearn, Cecil Bernhardt, and Burns Beaver. These boys together with several new men developed into one of the best teams Boyden High School has ever had. They defeated every team that was met except Charlotte which beat them 14 to 0.

CAPT GRAHAM, Center

Basketball got a late start but, even then, showed up unusually well. Only two games were lost, these being to Charlotte. The team was built around Captain Graham and Kesler, the only Lettermen back. Clark, a newcomer, showed up well, sharing high score honors with Captain Graham.

ONE DAY SERVICE

THE BEST STORY I HEARD TODAY

The best story that I heard today was told me by Joe Splpft, whom you remember was the half cousin of Bill ("Battlin") Ppzfhh. Bill ("Battlin") Ppzfhh used to be an old pal of Mortimer Denties, the Denties of Bar X fame.

Bill with his usual wit and humor, which he always mixes with his story, stopped me on the street the other day and told me a right good story about old Jon Vtfrtz, the old Jon Vtfrtz that used to ride with good old William ("Buffalo Bill") Cody in his wild west show.

It seems that the other day that a colored servant of Spzv was walking down the street when he ran right smack into our old friend, Pete Hhhjh.

"Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" says Pete

"That wasn't no lady, that was my wife." says Jerry right back at him.

That's Jerry all over, just a good natured fellow that helps make the world go around.

CAN YOU FEATURE?

Uriah Lucas with laryngitis?
 Ed Church not running after some girl?
 John Lee Boyd studying history?
 Walt Wagoner with a bashful and subdued look on his face?
 W. F. Whitt, a slender giant of 6 feet 6 inches?
 Henry Fairley and Russell Kerr not together or looking for each other?
 Mary Edna Rouzer yelling the length of the corridor?
 Alice Wright Murphy saying, "Frank? Oh, I've even quit speaking to him"?
 Sarah Lentz good and mad just on general principles?
 Clarence Kluttz not engaged in politics?
 Students having a long dinner period?
 Rebecca Weant flunking all of her subjects?
 James Dorsett being on time?
 Tom Hines without that "I am the stuff" look on his manly countenance?

Sam Ryburn, Burglars broke into my house last night.

C. T. Morgan, Gosh, what did they do? Sam, Well, after ransacking all my belongings, they left a $5.00 bill for me on the bureau.

John Weisner, Say, Bill, what's the matter with you?

Bill Weisner, Asthma.

John, Hey Ma., what's the matter with him?

Teacher, L. H., what is a canibal?

L. H. Julian, I don't know.

Teacher, Well, if you ate your father, what would you be?

L. H., An orphan, of course.

Russell Kerr, No, I will not have any slot machines in the school store that involve gambling.

Max Busby, Oh, these are not gambling devices. The customers haven't got a chance.
